CORPORATE AVATAR: OFF DUTY

MASTER SCRIPT — 24-HOUR LIVESTREAM

Tagline: YOU NEED CLOTHES FOR LIFE.

Format: 24-hour live cultural experience / documentary-style production / scripted reality / fashion and lifestyle programming

Location: New York City, with the physical evening event planned for Williamsburg / Bushwick, Brooklyn.

Proposed livestream window: 9:30 AM Day 1 – 9:30 AM Day 2
Document status: Working Master Script — casting, venue, guest appearances, sponsor integrations, and production details subject to confirmation.

1. CREATIVE NORTH STAR

Corporate Avatar: Off Duty asks one central question:

Who are you when you're off duty?

We dress for work, school, dates, doctors' appointments, interviews, errands, celebrations, travel, exercise, rest, and the unexpected. Clothing is a practical necessity, but it is also a language. It can signal belonging, status, discipline, resistance, aspiration, taste, or indifference.

The production follows a group of people through a single day and night, examining the different identities they inhabit and the clothes that accompany them.

The story moves through eight acts:

1. Morning — The City Gets Dressed
2. Identity — The Corporate Avatar
3. The Closet — What We Own and What We See
4. Transformation — The People Who Make Clothing Matter
5. The Gathering — Red Carpet and Main Conversation
6. Off Duty — New York After Dark
7. The Quiet Hours — Rest, Hospitality, and Sunrise

8. The Return — Taking Care of the Person Inside the Clothes

The program combines prepared scenes and dialogue with real conversations, location reporting, demonstrations, interviews, audience participation, and creator-led segments. The hosts guide the story; participants bring their own experiences.

The goal is not to tell viewers what clothing means. It is to give them enough perspectives to decide for themselves.

2. CAST BIBLE — WORKING IDENTIFIERS

3. ACT I — THE CITY GETS DRESSED

SCENE 01 — THE FIRST DECISION

Time: 9:30–9:45 AM
Set: New York streets, apartment interiors, subway entrances, morning storefronts
Cast: HOST-01 Maya; COR-01 Jordan; background participants
Purpose: Establish the premise before explaining the event.

Visual

A sequence of ordinary morning moments.

A person checks a mirror. Someone pulls on a jacket. A student adjusts a backpack. A professional buttons a shirt. A commuter checks the weather. Someone changes an outfit, then changes back.

Close-ups: hands, hems, shoes, bags, zippers, coats, reflections in glass.

The city is not introduced through landmarks alone. It is introduced through people preparing to enter it.

Dialogue

MAYA — VOICEOVER

“Every morning, before most of us say a word to the outside world, we make a decision.”

Cut to a person looking at two jackets.

“We decide what to wear.”

Cut to a train arriving.

“Sometimes we think about it for an hour. Sometimes we give it ten seconds.”

Cut to someone leaving home.

“Sometimes we love the decision. Sometimes we don't even remember making it.”

Maya appears on camera, walking along a Brooklyn street.

MAYA

“Good morning, New York.”

“Today, we're following something most of us do every day, often without thinking about it.”

Beat.

“We're getting dressed.”

MAYA

“But we're not here to decide who has the best outfit.”

She looks into camera.

“We're here to ask a different question.”

Pause.

“Who are you when you're off duty?”

Title sequence

CORPORATE AVATAR: OFF DUTY

YOU NEED CLOTHES FOR LIFE.

A 24-HOUR NEW YORK EXPERIENCE.

Transition

Jordan crosses the frame on the street. The camera follows.

JORDAN

“Let's meet someone who says they don't care about fashion.”

Cut to Alex's apartment.

SCENE 02 — THE PERSON WHO DOESN'T CARE

Time: 9:45–10:00 AM
Set: AV-01 Alex's apartment
Cast: Maya, Alex
Purpose: Introduce the first contradiction.

Visual

Alex chooses a simple outfit. No elaborate styling. The scene should feel natural rather than staged as a joke.

Dialogue

MAYA

“Do you care about fashion?”

ALEX

“Not really.”

MAYA

“Do you think about what you're going to wear?”

ALEX

“Only when I have to.”

MAYA

“When do you have to?”

ALEX

“Work. If it's cold. If I'm going somewhere nice. If something's uncomfortable.”

MAYA

“So you do have rules.”

ALEX

“I wouldn't call them rules.”

MAYA

“What would you call them?”

ALEX

“Common sense.”

Maya looks at the outfit.

MAYA

“Who chose this?”

ALEX

“I did.”

MAYA

“Then even if you don't care about fashion, you still make decisions about clothing.”

ALEX

“I guess.”

MAYA

“Maybe you don't care about fashion. But you care about being comfortable, being prepared, and getting on with your day.”

Alex shrugs.

ALEX

“That's fair.”

Camera direction

Hold on Alex for a moment after the exchange. Avoid a punchline. The point is that indifference is a real relationship with clothing, not an absence of one.

Transition

Cut to Zara selecting accessories and reviewing an outfit in the mirror.

SCENE 03 — THE PERSON WHO CARES A LOT

Time: 10:00–10:15 AM
Set: AV-03 Zara's dressing area
Cast: Maya, Zara
Purpose: Introduce the opposite relationship with fashion.

Dialogue

MAYA

“How long have you spent getting ready today?”

ZARA

“Do you want the honest answer?”

MAYA

“That's why we're here.”

ZARA

“Long enough that I don't want anyone asking me if I'm ready.”

They laugh.

MAYA

“What are you deciding?”

ZARA

“How I want to feel. What I want to communicate. Whether the outfit works for the place I'm going.”

MAYA

“Do you dress for yourself or for other people?”

ZARA

“Both. I dress for myself, but I live in a world where other people see me.”

MAYA

“Does that ever become exhausting?”

ZARA

“Absolutely. Sometimes it gives everyone else control over how they interpret me. Other times, it gives me a way to take control of that interpretation.”

MAYA

“So clothing can be freedom, but it can also be work.”

ZARA

“Exactly.”

Transition

Split-screen: Alex puts on a jacket; Zara chooses between two pairs of shoes.

MAYA — VOICEOVER

“Two people. Two relationships with clothing. Both still have to get dressed.”

SCENE 04 — THE QUESTION THAT CONNECTS THEM

Time: 10:15–10:30 AM
Set: Brooklyn sidewalk or café exterior
Cast: Maya, Alex, Zara, Jordan
Purpose: Bring opposing perspectives into the same conversation.

Dialogue

MAYA

“Alex says clothing isn't important.”

ZARA

“That's impossible.”

ALEX

“Why?”

ZARA

“Because you're still wearing clothes.”

ALEX

“That doesn't mean I care about fashion.”

ZARA

“No. But it means you have a relationship with it.”

ALEX

“That's a very fashion-person way of saying that.”

ZARA

“And that's a very non-fashion-person way of avoiding the question.”

The group laughs.

JORDAN

“Let's make the question simpler. Have you ever changed what you wore because of where you were going?”

“Of course.”

JORDAN

“Then what did the place require from you?”

A pause.

ALEX

“That's different.”

MAYA

“Is it?”

She turns to camera.

MAYA

“Today, we're going to find out.”

Transition

Graphic: CLOTHING / IDENTITY / WORK / CULTURE / LIFE.

SCENE 05 — MEET GOODHEART

Time: 10:30–10:50 AM
Set: GoodHeart demonstration station
Cast: Maya, Dian
Purpose: Introduce GoodHeart as infrastructure supporting the story, not as an advertisement interrupting it.

Visual

Dian takes a photograph of a clothing arrangement. The interface processes the image and identifies multiple garments. Show the real working product and actual capabilities only.

Dialogue

MAYA

“Let's talk about the clothes themselves. Most of us have a closet, but how well do we actually know what's in it?”

DIAN

“People can own a lot of clothing and still have very little visibility into their wardrobe.”

MAYA

“What does visibility mean here?”

DIAN

“Knowing what you have, what you wear, what you don't wear, what might need attention, and what options are already available to you.”

Dian demonstrates the product.

MAYA

“One picture?”

“One picture can identify multiple garments in the image.”

MAYA

“Not one picture per garment?”

DIAN

“That's the idea behind our Single-Picture-Multiple Garment technology.”

MAYA

“And what happens after the clothes are identified?”

DIAN

“The digital closet can become a starting point. You can organize what you own, understand your wardrobe, and explore what to keep, alter, sell, give away, or reimagine.”

MAYA

“So the point isn't just to take another picture of your clothes.”

DIAN

“Right. The point is to make the wardrobe more useful.”

Camera direction

Capture the screen, the clothing, and the human interaction. Do not imply that the product performs a function that has not been verified.

Transition

Nia enters carrying several garments.

NIA

“Before we decide what to buy next, maybe we should look at what we already have.”

SCENE 06 — THE CLOSET SEES ITSELF

Time: 10:50–11:15 AM
Set: Wardrobe rack / apartment closet
Cast: Nia, Dian, Maya
Purpose: Introduce the closet audit and the distinction between ownership and visibility.

Dialogue

NIA

“You don't necessarily have a shopping problem. You might have a visibility problem.”

MAYA

“Explain that.”

NIA

“You buy something, wear it a few times, move it to the back of the closet, forget it exists, and eventually buy something similar.”

DIAN

“When you can see what you own, you can make a more informed decision about what you actually need.”

MAYA

“But a closet isn't just inventory.”

NIA

“No. There's memory in there. There's the version of yourself you used to be. There's the job you left, the event you attended, the size you were, the person you were trying to become.”

Maya lifts a garment from the rack.

MAYA

“What do we do with all those versions of ourselves?”

NIA

“Sometimes we keep them. Sometimes we change them. Sometimes we let them go.”

Transition

Graphic: THE CLOSET AUDIT — KEEP / ALTER / SELL / GIVE / UPCYCLE.

SCENE 07 — MEET THE PEOPLE BEHIND THE EXPERIENCE

Time: 11:15–11:30 AM
Set: Production base / crew area
Cast: Maya, Jordan, Dian, Nia, Marcus
Purpose: Establish the team and prepare viewers for the next 22 hours.

Each team member answers one question directly to camera.

MAYA

“What question are you bringing into today?”

JORDAN

“I'm asking what New York looks like when we pay attention to what people are wearing.”

NIA

“I'm asking what we can do with the clothes we already have.”

MARCUS

“I'm asking who taught us what looks appropriate—and who gets to decide.”

DIAN

“I'm asking how technology can make a wardrobe more visible and more useful.”

MAYA

“And I'm asking what happens when we stop treating clothing as something we wear only for work, and start looking at all the lives we live in it.”

MAYA TO CAMERA

“This is Corporate Avatar: Off Duty. We're going to be here for the next 24 hours, and the story is going to keep changing.”

4. ACT II — THE PEOPLE WHO MAKE IT POSSIBLE

SCENE 08 — SPONSORS, PARTNERS, AND CONTRIBUTORS

Time: 11:30–12:00 PM
Set: Production base / partner displays / remote interviews
Cast: Maya, Jordan, confirmed partners and sponsors
Purpose: Acknowledge the organizations helping create the experience.

Format

- 11:30–11:35 — Meet the team and production orientation
- 11:35–12:00 — Confirmed partner introductions and contributions

Host introduction

MAYA

“An experience like this doesn't happen because one person has an idea. It happens because people contribute technology, clothing, space, skill, time, funding, and imagination.”

“For this part of the story, we're meeting some of the people and organizations helping bring it to life.”

Partner interview prompts

1. What part of the experience are you helping make possible?
2. Why does this subject matter to your organization?
3. What do you hope people will experience or learn?
4. What does your organization believe people need beyond their professional identities?

Production rule

Only confirmed partners are introduced as partners. Prospective sponsors are not represented as confirmed participants. Paid or sponsored integrations must be identified appropriately.

Transition

Jordan steps away from the partner display and heads toward a local food location.

JORDAN

“We've talked about what people wear. Now let's talk about what they do when they're not working.”

SCENE 09 — WHAT DOES NEW YORK EAT OFF DUTY?

Time: 12:00–12:30 PM
Set: NYC lunch location
Cast: Jordan, local business owner or chef, guests
Purpose: Shift from professional identity to everyday life and local culture.

Dialogue

JORDAN

“Everybody needs to eat. But even lunch has a setting, a pace, and sometimes a dress code.”

JORDAN TO BUSINESS OWNER

“What does a typical lunch crowd look like here?”

Follow-up questions:

- Who comes here during the workday?
- Who comes here on weekends?
- Does the neighborhood change after work?
- What do people do here when they're off duty?

Jordan speaks with customers who consent to participate.

JORDAN

“There's the version of us that sits in a meeting. There's the version that runs out for lunch. And there's the version that sits down and finally has time to breathe.”

Transition

A table is cleared. A garment bag is placed on a chair.

JORDAN — VOICEOVER

“Now let's meet the people behind the outfits.”

5. ACT III — THE CORPORATE AVATAR

SCENE 10 — WHO TAUGHT YOU WHAT PROFESSIONAL LOOKS LIKE?

Time: 12:30–1:00 PM
Set: Interview space / office-like environment
Cast: Maya, Chris, Imani, Noah, Marcus
Purpose: Introduce workplace dress expectations.

Dialogue

MAYA

“Chris, when someone says ‘professional attire,’ what comes to mind?”

CHRIS

“Something appropriate for the setting. Clean, put together, not distracting.”

MARCUS

“Who decides what counts as distracting?”

CHRIS

“The people in the room, I suppose.”

IMANI

“Which means the same outfit can be acceptable in one room and unacceptable in another.”

NOAH

“And if you're new, nobody necessarily tells you the rules.”

MAYA

“So how do you learn?”

NOAH

“You watch everybody else.”

IMANI

“Or you learn by being corrected. Sometimes by being judged before anybody tells you what the expectation was.”

MARCUS

“Then professionalism isn't only about clothing. It's also about the people who interpret it.”

CHRIS

“I think it can be both. Some expectations serve a practical purpose. Others are assumptions people have inherited.”

MAYA

“How do we tell the difference?”

Silence. Let the question remain open.

Transition

A close-up of a shirt cuff. Cut to Noah standing outside a building.

SCENE 11 — THE FIRST DAY

Time: 1:00–1:20 PM
Set: Street outside an office / neutral interview set
Cast: Noah, Maya
Purpose: Personalize the anxiety of entering a new professional environment.

Dialogue

MAYA

“Think back to your first day in a professional environment. What were you worried about?”

NOAH

“Getting things wrong. Not knowing how people expected me to act.”

MAYA

“Did you think about what to wear?”

NOAH

“Definitely. I wanted to look like I belonged there.”

MAYA

“Did anybody tell you what that looked like?”

NOAH

“Not exactly. You look at what other people wear and try to figure it out.”

MAYA

“What would have helped?”

NOAH

“Someone explaining the expectations without making me feel like I should already know.”

Transition

Cut to Imani preparing an outfit.

SCENE 12 — WOMAN IN THE ROOM

Time: 1:20–1:40 PM
Set: Imani's dressing area / office exterior
Cast: Imani, Maya
Purpose: Explore how dress expectations can differ across contexts.

Dialogue

MAYA

“When you're entering a room where you're already aware you may be judged differently, does clothing become more important?”

IMANI

“Sometimes. You think about what will make it easier to be heard. You think about what people might assume before you speak.”

MAYA

“Does that mean dressing for yourself becomes less important?”

IMANI

“Not necessarily. But you can become more strategic about how you present yourself.”

MAYA

“Does that feel empowering?”

IMANI

“Sometimes. Other times, it's exhausting to feel like you're managing an interpretation before the conversation even begins.”

MAYA

“What would you want to change?”

IMANI

“I'd like people to listen to what someone is saying before deciding how much their clothes tell them.”

Transition

Marcus walks through a public space.

MARCUS — VOICEOVER

“We learn the rules by watching. But who wrote them?”

SCENE 13 — THE SCHOOL DAY

Time: 1:40–2:00 PM
Set: School-adjacent public space or a suitable permitted location
Cast: Jay, Maya
Purpose: Bring younger perspectives into the story.

Dialogue

MAYA

“When you get dressed for school, who are you dressing for?”

JAY

“Myself.”

Beat.

“My friends.”

Beat.

“My teachers.”

MAYA

“That's three different answers.”

JAY

“Because all three see you.”

MAYA

“Do clothes affect how people treat you?”

JAY

“Sometimes. People notice what you wear, even if they say they don't.”

MAYA

“What about school rules?”

JAY

“Some make sense. Some feel like people deciding what kind of person you are based on what you're wearing.”

MAYA

“If you could change one clothing rule, what would it be?”

Allow Jay to answer in their own words.

Production note

Obtain the appropriate permissions and releases for any minor participant. Do not identify a school or expose private student information without authorization.

Transition

A school bag becomes a work bag in a match cut. Noah's hand closes it; Chris opens his.

SCENE 14 — THE EXECUTIVE AND THE SIGNAL

Time: 2:00–2:15 PM
Set: Office-like interview space
Cast: David, Maya, Marcus
Purpose: Examine clothing and perceived authority.

Dialogue

MAYA

“David, do you think clothing affects how people perceive authority?”

DAVID

“Yes. Whether that is fair is a separate question.”

MARCUS

“What signals do you think people read?”

DAVID

“Confidence, preparation, familiarity with the environment. Sometimes status.”

MAYA

“Can someone look powerful without expensive clothing?”

DAVID

“Of course.”

MARCUS

“Then what are people actually responding to?”

DAVID

“That depends on the person doing the interpreting. Sometimes it's fit. Sometimes it's context. Sometimes it's simply whether someone looks comfortable in what they're wearing.”

MAYA

“Can clothing create authority, or does it only change how authority is perceived?”

Let the participant answer without a predetermined conclusion.

Transition

David leaves the interview frame. Alex enters it wearing the same simple outfit from the morning.

MAYA

“We've heard from people who think about clothing all the time. Now let's see what happens when we look at the clothes themselves.”

SCENE 15 — THE CLOSET AUDIT

Time: 2:15–3:00 PM
Set: Wardrobe station / clothing racks / GoodHeart demonstration
Cast: Nia, Dian, Alex, Zara, Sam, Jordan
Purpose: Move from discussion into a tangible wardrobe experience.

Segment A — 2:15–2:30: The audit

Nia invites each participant to identify garments they wear frequently, rarely, or not at all.

NIA

“Don't start by asking whether something is fashionable. Start by asking whether it has a place in your life.”

ALEX

“What if I just don't wear it?”

NIA

“Then we ask why. Does it not fit? Is it uncomfortable? Does it need repair? Does it belong to a different version of your life?”

ZARA

“Or maybe I love it, but I never have anywhere to wear it.”

MAYA

“Is the answer always to get rid of something?”

NIA

“No. Sometimes the answer is to understand it better.”

Segment B — 2:30–2:45: The five decisions

Introduce five possible pathways:

- KEEP — Continue wearing it.
- ALTER — Change the fit or function.
- SELL — Give it another life through resale.
- GIVE — Pass it to someone who can use it.
- UPCYCLE — Transform it into something different.

MAYA

“These aren't moral categories. They're choices. The goal isn't to own the fewest clothes possible. The goal is to make more intentional decisions about what we own.”

Segment C — 2:45–3:00: The first transformation

A participant chooses a garment to repair, alter, restyle, or recirculate.

NIA

“What do you want this piece to do for you?”

The participant responds.

NIA

“Then let's work backward from that.”

Transition

Rae enters carrying a garment that has been selected for upcycling.

RAE

“Sometimes the next outfit is already in the closet. It just hasn't become what it could be yet.”

6. ACT IV — MY STYLE

SCENE 16 — THE PEOPLE WHO MAKE CLOTHING

Time: 3:00–3:30 PM
Set: Maker station / thrift store / tailoring studio
Cast: Lena, Rae, Toni, Elle, Mo, Nia
Purpose: Show the human work behind clothing and the possibilities beyond buying new.

Segment A — The thrift

JORDAN TO LENA

“What are you looking for when you source clothing?”

LENA

“Potential. Sometimes it's the fabric. Sometimes it's the cut. Sometimes it's something people overlook because they can't immediately picture what it could become.”

JORDAN

“Do you always know what you're looking for?”

LENA

“No. Sometimes the piece tells you.”

Capture the search, inspection, fabric details, and selection process.

Segment B — The alteration

NIA TO TONI

“What can a tailor change about a garment?”

TONI

“More than people realize. Fit, length, proportion, construction. Sometimes a small adjustment makes something wearable again.”

NIA

“So a garment doesn't necessarily become useless because it doesn't fit perfectly.”

TONI

“Exactly. It may need a different relationship with the person wearing it.”

Segment C — The upcycle

Rae explains the chosen garment and the planned transformation.

RAE

“Upcycling starts with a question: what else could this become?”

MAYA

“Is the goal to make it look new?”

RAE

“Not necessarily. Sometimes the history is the best part.”

Segment D — The maker

Mo demonstrates a real manufacturing or construction process appropriate to the production setup.

JORDAN

“What do people misunderstand about making clothes?”

MO

“They see the finished product. They don't always see the decisions, skill, equipment, time, and material that went into it.”

Transition

A garment moves from the sewing table to a fitting area. Music builds as the transformation continues.

SCENE 17 — MY STYLE

Time: 3:30–4:15 PM
Set: Styling area / mirror station / wardrobe rack
Cast: Nia, INF-01–06, Alex, Sam, Zara, Chris, Imani, Noah, Jay
Purpose: Let participants express themselves rather than conform to one stylistic ideal.

Format

Each participant receives a brief prompt:

- What do you want to feel in this outfit?
- Where would you wear it?
- What part of yourself does it express?
- What would you change?
- Is there a rule you're choosing to follow—or ignore?

Dialogue example

NIA TO ALEX

“You've said you don't care about fashion. If you could change one thing about your everyday outfit, what would make your life easier?”

ALEX

“Comfort. I don't want to spend the day adjusting my clothes.”

NIA

“Then comfort is the brief.”

Cut to Zara.

NIA

“What is your brief?”

ZARA

“I want to feel like I made a decision. I don't want to look like I got dressed by accident.”

Cut to Chris.

NIA

“What do you want your outfit to communicate at work?”

CHRIS

“That I understand the environment, without feeling like I'm wearing a costume.”

Cut to Jay.

NIA

“What would you wear if nobody could judge you?”

Jay responds in their own words.

Camera direction

Capture the process, not only the reveal. Show uncertainty, adjustments, laughter, and personal choices. Avoid treating one body type, gender expression, price point, or style as the correct outcome.

Transition

A rack is wheeled into the next set. A clock graphic appears.

ON-SCREEN TEXT: TWO HOURS UNTIL THE RED CARPET.

SCENE 18 — THE WARDROBE LIST

Time: 4:15–5:00 PM
Set: Wardrobe display / GoodHeart Shop demonstration
Cast: Nia, Dian, Jordan, participating vendors and creators
Purpose: Connect discovery with practical access.

Dialogue

MAYA

“We've talked about what people wear and why they wear it. Now let's look at the pieces that have become part of the experience.”

NIA

“This isn't a list of what everybody should buy. It's a list of things people selected, made, altered, or wanted to share.”

DIAN

“Where the relevant items are available through GoodHeart or participating vendors, viewers can explore the details and find out how to access them.”

On-screen item information

Where available and verified:

- Item name

- Creator, designer, maker, or seller
- Category
- Price
- Size and availability
- Material or care information
- Alteration or customization options
- Purchase or inquiry link

Production rule

Display only accurate pricing, stock status, and transaction links. Distinguish items that are available for purchase from samples, borrowed garments, one-off pieces, and editorial styling.

Transition

The screen changes from wardrobe items to the people wearing them.

MAYA

“But an outfit doesn't tell the whole story. Let's meet the people behind the choices.”

SCENE 19 — THE TRANSFORMATION

Time: 5:00–6:00 PM
Set: Styling studio / tailoring station / event venue preparation
Cast: Nia, Rae, Toni, Elle, Mo, creators, participants
Purpose: Build anticipation for the evening while documenting the process.

Segment A — 5:00–5:20: The fitting

Capture the final fittings, alterations, styling decisions, and honest reactions.

NIA

“What feels different about this outfit?”

The participant answers.

NIA

“Is it different because the clothes changed, or because you see yourself differently in them?”

Allow the participant to answer without forcing a transformation narrative.

Segment B — 5:20–5:40: The makers' final check

Rae, Toni, Elle, and Mo inspect the pieces they have worked on.

MAYA

“What do you hope people notice when they see this garment?”

Each maker answers in their own words.

Segment C — 5:40–6:00: The final preparations

Quick cuts of the venue, wardrobe displays, red-carpet setup, microphones, lighting, crew, and confirmed partner activations.

JORDAN

“All day, we've been asking people what clothing means to them. Tonight, those perspectives come together in one room.”

MAYA

“The red carpet begins at six. The conversation begins at seven-thirty.”

She looks into camera.

“And neither requires everyone to agree.”

Transition

Sound drops to room tone. The first guests begin arriving.

7. ACT V — THE GATHERING
SCENE 20 — THE RED CARPET

Time: 6:00–7:00 PM
Set: Williamsburg / Bushwick venue entrance
Cast: Maya, Jordan, Nia, confirmed guests, creators, partners
Purpose: Introduce the evening's people and establish the visual tone.

Opening

JORDAN

“We've spent the day asking what people wear and what those choices mean. Now we're meeting some of the people who have come to continue the conversation.”

Red-carpet interview questions

1. What are you wearing, and what do you want people to know about it?
2. What does being off duty mean to you?
3. Is there an outfit you wear when you want to feel powerful?
4. What is something people assume about you because of your clothes?
5. What's one clothing rule you would change?
6. What's one garment you could never throw away?
7. Do you dress differently when nobody is watching?

Example exchange

JORDAN TO GUEST

“What are you wearing tonight?”

The guest describes the outfit.

JORDAN

“And what does it say about you?”

GUEST

The guest answers.

JORDAN

“Is that the message you intend to send, or the message you think people will receive?”

Give the guest time to answer.

Camera direction

Alternate full-length outfit shots with close details and face-to-face conversation. Avoid reducing every interview to designer names or price tags.

Transition

The camera follows guests into the venue.

MAYA — VOICEOVER

“A room full of different people doesn't mean a room full of agreement. That's the point.”

SCENE 21 — WELCOME TO THE ROOM

Time: 7:00–7:30 PM
Set: Main event space
Cast: Maya, confirmed speakers, audience
Purpose: Prepare the room for the main conversation.

Visual

Guests settle. The stage is prepared. The audience sees the main stage and the people seated for the opening discussion.

A brief welcome and event orientation take place. If the program allows, a short introduction to GoodHeart and the participating makers follows.

Host dialogue

MAYA

“Welcome to Corporate Avatar: Off Duty.”

Pause.

“We've spent today following people through their closets, their workplaces, their routines, their choices, and the places where they feel most like themselves.”

“Some people told us they don't care about fashion. Some told us that clothing is one of the ways they express themselves. Some told us that getting dressed can be a strategy for being taken seriously.”

“Those experiences don't have to cancel each other out.”

“Tonight, we're going to ask what happens when all those people sit in the same room.”

“There's no required answer. There's no dress code for the conversation. And you don't have to be a fashion expert to have something to say.”

“Because every one of us has to get dressed.”

“And every one of us has a life outside the role we perform for the world.”

“Welcome.”

Transition

The lights settle. The opening panel takes their places.

SCENE 22 — THE MAIN CONVERSATION: WHAT DOES CLOTHING SAY?

Time: 7:30–8:15 PM
Set: Main stage
Cast: Maya, selected speakers representing different relationships with clothing
Purpose: Establish clothing as communication without assuming everyone experiences it the same way.

Opening question

MAYA

“Let's start with a simple question. What do people assume about you based on what you're wearing?”

Invite two or three different responses.

Follow-up questions

- Have you ever been mistaken for someone you are not because of your clothing?
- Have you ever dressed to avoid attention?
- Have you ever dressed to demand attention?
- Is clothing a form of communication?
- Does intention matter if the audience interprets it differently?
- Can someone genuinely not care about fashion?

Scripted bridge

MAYA

“Alex told us this morning that they don't care about fashion. Zara told us that deciding how to enter a room is part of why fashion matters to her.”

“Neither experience is imaginary. But both people live in a world where other people can interpret what they wear.”

“So perhaps the question isn't whether clothing communicates.”

“Perhaps the question is whether we get to decide what it communicates.”

Audience participation

Invite one or two audience responses. The host should make space for disagreement and prevent the conversation from turning into a contest over whose style is superior.

SCENE 23 — WHAT DOES PROFESSIONAL LOOK LIKE?

Time: 8:15–9:00 PM
Set: Main stage
Cast: Maya, Chris, Imani, Noah, David, other confirmed speakers
Purpose: Explore professionalism, hiring, workplace expectations, and power.

Opening question

MAYA

“Who taught you what professional looks like?”

Allow each speaker to answer from experience.

Discussion sequence

MAYA TO DAVID

“When you meet someone for the first time in a professional setting, how much does clothing influence your impression?”

MAYA TO NOAH

“When you're new to an environment, how do you find out what the expectations are?”

MAYA TO IMANI

“Have you ever felt that you had to think about clothing in order to be heard or taken seriously?”

MAYA TO CHRIS

“Which dress expectations serve a practical purpose, and which are simply inherited habits?”

Moderator bridge

MAYA

“We should distinguish between a rule that helps someone do a job and a rule that merely tells someone they don't look like the people who have traditionally done it.”

“Those are not necessarily the same thing.”

Discussion prompts

- Should hiring decisions be influenced by clothing?
- When is a dress code reasonable?
- Who has the power to define professionalism?
- What happens when an expectation is not clearly communicated?
- Can a workplace maintain standards without demanding that everyone look the same?

Transition

MAYA

“We've talked about the rooms where people want to belong. What about the rooms where they are still learning who they are?”

SCENE 24 — GENERATIONS, SCHOOL, AND BELONGING

Time: 9:00–9:40 PM
Set: Main stage
Cast: Maya, Jay, Noah, selected speakers
Purpose: Connect workplace expectations to school, peer culture, and identity formation.

Opening question

MAYA TO JAY

“When you get dressed for school, who are you dressing for?”

Jay responds in their own words.

MAYA

“Do you think adults understand what clothing means to people your age?”

Jay responds.

MAYA TO THE PANEL

“What changes when someone moves from school into the workplace? Are they learning a new dress code, or a new way of being judged?”

Discussion prompts

- What does clothing mean during adolescence?
- How do peer expectations affect personal style?
- Is belonging sometimes purchased through clothing?
- What happens when someone cannot afford what is considered appropriate?
- Should schools and workplaces explain their expectations more clearly?

Transition

The host turns to the audience.

MAYA

“We've heard from the people who make the rules, the people who follow them, and the people still figuring them out. Let's ask the room what we have missed.”

SCENE 25 — VIP THINK TANK AND AUDIENCE DIALOGUE

Time: 9:40–10:15 PM
Set: Main stage / audience microphones
Cast: Maya, VIP-01–10, audience
Purpose: Make the discussion personal and participatory.

Think Tank prompts

Each participant receives a brief opportunity to respond.

1. What is your corporate avatar?
2. What do you wear when you want to be taken seriously?
3. What clothing makes you feel protected?
4. What do you wear when you want to disappear?
5. What garment feels like home?

6. What piece represents a former version of yourself?
7. What clothing rule would you eliminate?

Moderator instructions

- Invite different perspectives.
- Ask for examples rather than abstractions.
- Do not require participants to disclose private or painful experiences.
- Avoid implying that any one group has a universal experience.
- Keep responses concise enough for multiple voices.
- Allow respectful disagreement.

Host bridge

MAYA

“One thing I keep hearing is that clothing is personal, but the consequences are social.”

“We choose what we wear, but we don't always choose how people interpret it.”

“What do we owe each other in that space between expression and interpretation?”

Allow the room to respond.

SCENE 26 — CLOSING THE MAIN CONVERSATION

Time: 10:15–10:30 PM
Set: Main stage
Cast: Maya, selected speakers
Purpose: Close the formal dialogue without pretending every question has been resolved.

Final round

MAYA

“I want to end with one question. What is one thing you wish people would stop assuming about someone based on what they're wearing?”

Each selected speaker gives a concise answer.

Closing dialogue

MAYA

“We began today with a simple decision: getting dressed.”

“Along the way, we've talked about confidence, money, work, belonging, memory, identity, and the people who make the clothes we wear.”

“We haven't arrived at one definition of style or professionalism. That was never the point.”

“The point is to pay attention—to our choices, to our assumptions, and to the people standing in front of us.”

“Thank you for bringing your perspectives into this room.”

SCENE 27 — AUDIENCE Q&A

Time: 10:30–11:00 PM
Set: Main stage / audience
Cast: Maya, speakers, audience
Purpose: Give the audience a final opportunity to engage directly.

Format

- Audience members ask questions.
- The host directs each question to the most relevant speaker.
- Speakers may disagree respectfully.
- The host closes the formal event at 11:00 PM.

Closing announcement

MAYA

“Thank you to everyone who joined us in person tonight.”

“The room may be closing, but the experience isn't over.”

“Corporate Avatar: Off Duty continues through the night and into tomorrow morning. We'll follow New York through nightlife, hospitality, quiet hours, sunrise, wellness, and breakfast.”

“Because the person you are at work isn't the only person who needs clothes.”

“Stay with us.”

CUT TO: Exterior venue shot. The crowd disperses. The livestream continues.

8. ACT VI — OFF DUTY AFTER DARK

SCENE 28 — THE CITY CHANGES SHAPE

Time: 11:00 PM–12:00 AM
Set: Brooklyn streets / nightlife locations
Cast: Jordan, Nia, consenting guests, local hosts
Purpose: Explore clothing as people move from formal obligations into social life.

Opening

JORDAN

“The conversation is over for tonight. But New York isn't going to bed.”

“The same person who spent the day in meetings might be heading to a dance floor, a restaurant, a friend's apartment, or home.”

“What changes when the workday ends?”

Field questions

- Do you dress differently to go out than you do for work?
- Does nightlife give you more freedom to experiment?
- Do you feel pressure to dress a certain way when you go out?
- What makes an outfit right for a particular setting?

Transition

A subway passes. Streetlights reflect on shop windows.

JORDAN — VOICEOVER

“Off duty doesn't mean the expectations disappear. Sometimes, they simply change.”

SCENE 29 — AFTER HOURS: WHO GETS TO RELAX?

Time: 12:00–1:00 AM
Set: Approved nightlife venue or late-night public location
Cast: Jordan, consenting participants
Purpose: Explore the difference between freedom and another set of social expectations.

Interview prompts

- When do you feel most like yourself?
- Is going out another performance?
- What do you wear when you want to feel confident?
- Can you be overdressed? Underdressed?
- Does the place you go determine how you express yourself?

Editorial rule

Do not portray nightlife as one uniform culture. Include different kinds of people, settings, budgets, and reasons for being out.

Transition

The music fades into the ambient sound of the city. The camera follows a person leaving a venue.

SCENE 30 — THE CLOTHES WE REMEMBER

Time: 1:00–2:00 AM
Set: Quiet late-night interview location
Cast: Maya or Jordan, selected participants
Purpose: Slow the pace and introduce memory, attachment, and changing identity.

Opening question

HOST

“Is there an item of clothing you remember because of what was happening in your life when you wore it?”

Allow participants to tell personal stories.

Follow-up questions:

- Do you still own it?
- Would you wear it today?
- Has its meaning changed?
- Have you ever kept something because it belonged to a former version of yourself?

Voiceover

MAYA

“Sometimes a garment is more than a garment. It carries a memory of a person, a place, an ambition, or a life that no longer looks the same.”

“We don't have to keep everything forever. But it can be worth understanding what we're letting go of.”

Transition

A garment is folded and placed carefully on a shelf. Fade to a quiet street.

SCENE 31 — THE PEOPLE WHO KEEP THE CITY MOVING

Time: 2:00–3:00 AM
Set: Permitted late-night business or street location
Cast: Jordan, consenting night-shift workers or late-night participants
Purpose: Recognize people whose work happens outside conventional daytime schedules.

Opening

JORDAN

“Not everybody's day ends at five. Some people are starting work while other people are heading home.”

Interview questions

- What does your workday look like?
- What do you wear to do your job?
- Do you have a uniform?
- What do your clothes need to do for you?
- What do you change into when you finally get home?

Editorial note

Do not interrupt people who are working or film restricted spaces without authorization. Use planned interviews and approved locations.

Transition

A clock changes from 2:59 to 3:00 AM. The streets become quieter.

SCENE 32 — WHEN THE CITY GETS QUIET

Time: 3:00–4:00 AM
Set: Quiet interior / permitted exterior / production base
Cast: Maya, Jordan, selected participants
Purpose: Create a reflective interlude before the hospitality and sunrise chapters.

Dialogue

MAYA

“We've spent the day looking at the clothes people wear when they are visible to the world.”

“But what do we wear when we're done being visible?”

JORDAN

“Sometimes it's pajamas. Sometimes it's an old T-shirt. Sometimes it's the same clothes we wore all day because we're too tired to change.”

MAYA

“And sometimes the most important thing we put on is whatever lets us rest.”

Reflection prompts

- What does comfort mean to you?
- What do you wear when you want to be left alone?
- Does rest have a dress code?
- What does taking care of yourself look like after a long day?

Transition

The camera moves from the quiet room to the exterior of a hotel or approved accommodation location.

9. ACT VII — REST, HOSPITALITY, AND SUNRISE

SCENE 33 — A PLACE TO LAND

Time: 4:00–6:00 AM
Set: Confirmed hotel, accommodation partner, or hospitality location

Cast: Jordan, hospitality representative, consenting guests
Purpose: Explore the relationship between clothing, travel, rest, and temporary spaces.

Opening

JORDAN

“Sometimes being off duty means being somewhere unfamiliar. You're traveling, staying overnight, visiting someone, or taking a break from the routine.”

“What do you need to feel comfortable away from home?”

Interview questions

- What is the first thing you change into when you arrive?
- What do you always pack?
- What do you forget?
- What makes a space feel comfortable?
- Does the way you travel change the way you dress?

Production direction

This is a quieter chapter. Use natural sound, subdued lighting, and deliberate pacing. If no hospitality partner is confirmed, film in an approved public or production location and do not imply a commercial partnership.

Transition

The sky begins to lighten.

JORDAN

“New York is about to give us another morning.”

SCENE 34 — CHASING SUNRISE

Time: 6:00–7:00 AM
Set: Approved waterfront, rooftop, or publicly accessible sunrise location
Cast: Jordan, Maya or Nia, consenting participants
Purpose: Mark the emotional turning point between night and morning.

Visual

The city before sunrise. Quiet streets. Reflections on buildings. People walking or running. A coat pulled tighter against the cold. Hands holding warm drinks.

Dialogue

JORDAN

“We started yesterday morning with people getting dressed to enter the world.”

“Now we're watching the world wake up again.”

MAYA

“By this point, we've seen work clothes, school clothes, going-out clothes, uniforms, altered garments, old favorites, and pieces people are ready to pass on.”

“But we haven't found one answer to who we are when we're off duty.”

JORDAN

“Maybe that's because the answer changes.”

MAYA

“Or maybe it was never one answer.”

Transition

The sun clears the horizon. Natural sound takes over briefly.

On-screen text: ONE MORNING ENDS. ANOTHER BEGINS.

SCENE 35 — TAKE CARE OF THE PERSON INSIDE THE CLOTHES

Time: 7:00–8:00 AM
Set: Approved gym, yoga studio, walking route, or wellness location
Cast: Nia, Jordan, wellness instructor or participants
Purpose: Connect clothing with movement, comfort, and self-care.

Opening

NIA

“Clothing doesn't only help us present ourselves. It also has to work with our bodies and our lives.”

Demonstration

Show participants preparing for a walk, gym session, stretching, or yoga. Discuss function and comfort without prescribing a single ideal body or lifestyle.

Interview prompts

- What do you need your clothes to do when you exercise?
- How important are fit and comfort?
- Do you wear different things when you're alone than when you're around others?
- What makes you feel comfortable in your body?
- What does taking care of yourself mean to you?

Dialogue

NIA

“We talk a lot about how clothes look. But clothing also has to move with us, protect us from the weather, fit our routines, and let us do what we came to do.”

JORDAN

“Taking care of the clothes matters. But taking care of the person wearing them matters more.”

Transition

A participant finishes stretching, puts on a jacket, and heads toward breakfast.

SCENE 36 — BREAKFAST WITH YOURSELF

Time: 8:00–9:00 AM
Set: NYC breakfast location
Cast: Maya, Jordan, Nia, selected participants
Purpose: Bring the story back to an ordinary act and prepare the conclusion.

Opening

MAYA

“Yesterday, we asked people who they were when they were off duty.”

“We met people who care deeply about fashion and people who say they don't care at all. We talked to students, professionals, makers, and people trying to figure out what comes next.”

“Now we're having breakfast.”

Table conversation

MAYA TO ALEX

“After everything we've talked about, do you still say you don't care about fashion?”

Alex responds in their own words.

MAYA TO ZARA

“Has your relationship with fashion changed at all?”

Zara responds.

MAYA TO CHRIS

“What does professional mean to you now?”

Chris responds.

MAYA TO JAY

“What do you want people to understand about the way you dress?”

Jay responds.

MAYA TO DIAN

“What do you hope people do differently after this experience?”

Dian responds.

Final round

Each participant completes the sentence:

“When I'm off duty, I want to feel _____.”

Allow silence and natural conversation. Do not force every answer to be profound.

Transition

The camera moves from the breakfast table to Maya, who looks directly into the lens.

10. ACT VIII — THE RETURN

SCENE 37 — THE LAST QUESTION

Time: 9:00–9:20 AM
Set: Breakfast location / quiet exterior
Cast: Maya, selected participants
Purpose: Bring the different perspectives together without forcing consensus.

Dialogue

MAYA

“We started with a question about clothing. But the longer we talked, the more we found ourselves talking about something bigger.”

“How we want to be seen.”

“How other people see us.”

“What we expect from each other.”

“And what we need when the day is over.”

“Some of us use clothing to express ourselves. Some of us use it to get through the day. Some of us use it to fit in. Some of us use it to stand apart.”

“Sometimes clothing is a choice. Sometimes it comes with rules, limits, budgets, expectations, or responsibilities.”

“But all of us have to get dressed.”

Maya pauses.

“So perhaps the question isn't simply who you are when you're off duty.”

“Perhaps it's whether you have enough room to be all the versions of yourself.”

SCENE 38 — FINAL WORDS

Time: 9:20–9:30 AM
Set: Exterior NYC morning location
Cast: Maya, full team where available
Purpose: Close the 24-hour livestream and connect the experience to GoodHeart.

Visual

A final montage:

- Alex leaving home.
- Zara checking her outfit.
- Noah walking into a building.
- Jay heading out for the day.
- Imani preparing for work.
- Chris hanging up a jacket.
- Lena sourcing a garment.
- Rae working on an alteration.
- Toni finishing a hem.
- Mo at the maker station.
- Guests entering the event.
- The red carpet.
- The main conversation.
- New York after dark.
- Sunrise.
- The breakfast table.

Return to Maya.

Final dialogue

MAYA

“Yesterday, we asked you who you were when you were off duty.”

“Maybe the answer isn't a different person.”

“Maybe it's simply the person underneath all the roles.”

“The person who works. The person who rests. The person who creates, learns, changes, makes mistakes, falls in love, starts over, and becomes someone new.”

“Every version of you needs something to wear.”

“So take care of your clothes. Take care of your closet.”

“And most importantly, take care of the person inside them.”

“Because you don't just need clothes for work.”

Pause.

MAYA

“YOU NEED CLOTHES FOR LIFE.”

CUT TO: CORPORATE AVATAR: OFF DUTY title card.

ON-SCREEN TEXT:

A GOODHEART EXPERIENCE.

Explore your wardrobe. Discover new possibilities. Connect with the people who make clothing matter.

LIVESTREAM ENDS — 9:30 AM.

11. PRODUCTION RULES FOR THE MASTER SCRIPT

A. Scripted versus unscripted

Scripted: Opening narration, host introductions, transitions, demonstration explanations, sponsor acknowledgments, segment framing, closing narration.

Guided but unscripted: Personal interviews, red-carpet responses, panel discussions, audience Q&A, creator reflections, Think Tank contributions.

Documentary coverage: Wardrobe sourcing, fittings, alterations, venue preparations, New York field segments, and overnight observations.

The dialogue in this draft establishes the intended tone and narrative. Participants should not be required to repeat a personal story or deliver an opinion they do not hold.

B. Livestream continuity

The program must have a designated control room and a live rundown covering the entire 24-hour period.

Every segment needs:

- A named segment lead.
- Confirmed participants and location.
- Planned start and end times.
- Camera and audio requirements.
- A transition into the next segment.
- A contingency for delays, cancellations, or unavailable locations.
- A plan for maintaining the stream during location changes.

Do not treat an empty schedule block as permission to improvise indefinitely. Use prepared interviews, creator segments, wardrobe demonstrations, recap packages, and approved recorded material as needed.

C. Sponsorship integration

Sponsor appearances must support the story and be agreed upon in advance.

Possible integration points include:

- Technology used to capture the experience.
- Wardrobe and garment demonstrations.
- Creator and production segments.
- Red-carpet and event experiences.
- Hospitality, food, and wellness chapters.
- The GoodHeart Shop and participating vendor experiences.

Do not describe a prospective partner as confirmed. Clearly identify paid or sponsored content where required.

D. Participant consent and safety

- Obtain appropriate appearance releases.
- Obtain permissions for filming at private venues and commercial locations.
- Secure appropriate permissions and releases for minors.
- Respect privacy and personal boundaries.
- Do not film private conversations or restricted spaces without authorization.

- Confirm rights for music, artwork, logos, and third-party content.
- Establish overnight staffing, transportation, breaks, and emergency procedures.
- Do not promise that a casting submission guarantees selection or compensation.

E. Production principle

The experience should remain a conversation, not a commercial disguised as a conversation.

The audience should come away thinking about clothing, identity, and the people around them. GoodHeart, sponsors, vendors, and creators should be integrated where they genuinely contribute to that experience.

12. FINAL PRODUCTION CHECKLIST

Before this script becomes the locked production draft, confirm:

- ☐ Event date and 24-hour livestream window.
- ☐ Final venue and permissions.
- ☐ Final cast and character assignments.
- ☐ Speaker confirmations and panel composition.
- ☐ Creator and influencer participation.
- ☐ GoodHeart demonstrations using the actual product.
- ☐ Wardrobe, thrift, alteration, and upcycling participants.
- ☐ GoodHeart Shop inventory and accurate item links.
- ☐ Sponsor agreements and approved integrations.
- ☐ Field locations, releases, and filming permissions.
- ☐ Livestream production crew and control-room staffing.
- ☐ Backup programming and technical contingencies.
- ☐ Overnight safety, transport, and crew rest arrangements.
- ☐ Final run of show with exact segment timings.
- ☐ Final script review, rehearsal, and version lock.

END OF MASTER SCRIPT — WORKING DRAFT

ABOUT CORPORATE AVATAR: OFF DUTY

A cultural experience by GoodHeart.

Corporate Avatar: Off Duty is a 24-hour New York experience exploring the relationship between clothing, identity, work, culture, and everyday life.

Through storytelling, fashion, community dialogue, wardrobe discovery, and the people who create and transform clothing, the experience asks a simple question:

Who are you when you're off duty?

We believe clothing is more than a uniform for work or a way to make an impression. It accompanies us through every stage of life—from school and professional environments to personal milestones, creative expression, rest, and reinvention.

Corporate Avatar: Off Duty brings these experiences into one shared conversation, inviting people with different backgrounds, perspectives, and relationships with fashion to examine what clothing means to them and how it shapes the way we experience the world.

You don't just need clothes for work. You need clothes for life.

ABOUT GOODHEART

Making the wardrobe more visible, useful, and connected.

GoodHeart is a fashion-technology platform designed to connect people with their wardrobes and the wider clothing ecosystem.

Through its digital wardrobe technology and connected features, GoodHeart aims to help people document and organize clothing, discover what they own, explore fashion, and connect with opportunities to circulate, alter, repair, customize, and reimagine garments.

The broader GoodHeart ecosystem brings together digital wardrobe management, community, fashion commerce, resale and exchange, and connections with artisans and makers.

Our vision extends beyond organizing a closet. We see the digital wardrobe as a potential connection point between the individual, the garments they own, the people who work on those garments, and the wider systems through which clothing is created and circulated.

Corporate Avatar: Off Duty brings that vision into a real-world cultural experience—connecting technology with personal stories, fashion, creativity, and community.
